HOOVER HEARD AT SCENE OF GREAT VICTORY

Speaks Today at Celebration of Yorktown Sesquicentennial.

MANY NOTABLES PRESENT

President Reminds Nations of Obstacles Overcome in Past.

By The Associated Press

YORKTOWN, Va., Oct. 19—Standing where once George Washington led a ragged force to a great victory, President Hoover today warned that in the face of "temporary" dislocations, Americans must remember that similar obstacles had been overcome in the past as the nation swept forward to ever increasing strength.

The President spoke on the hallowed ground into a battery of modern microphones. He stood surrounded by three sides of a great amphitheater, seating many of the noted of this country and Europe, present for the pageantry commemorating the sesquicentennial of the battle of Yorktown.

But few of his words touched upon present day problems. Only as he closed did he picture in broad, brief strokes the advance of the nation during the past century and a half.

Secure Against Enemies

"It has attained a security amongst nations," he said, "by which no thought ever comes that an enemy may step within our borders.

"While temporary dislocations have come to us because of the World war, we must not forget that our forefathers met similar obstacles to progress time and again, and yet the nation has swept forward to ever increasing strength. • • • • No American can review this vast pageant of progress without confidence and faith, without courage, strength, and resolution for the future."

The chief executive asserted that without Washington "the war for independence would not have been won."

"The campaign which led to its final climax here established his military genius," he said. "It was the crown of victory which placed his name among the great commanders of all time."

Earlier he described the Battle of Yorktown as one of the few de-

FINAL MATHER RITES SET FOR WEDNESDAY

Bishop Rogers To Preside at Services of Noted Ohio Philanthropist.

By United Press

CLEVELAND, Oct. 19—Funeral services for Samuel Mather, Ohio's richest citizen and one of charity's greatest benefactors, who died Sunday, will be held Wednesday from Trinity Episcopal Cathedral.

Bishop Warren Lincoln Rogers, leader of the Episcopal diocese in Ohio, will preside at the services which will be attended by officials of scores of institutions which had benefitted from Mather's munificence.

Mather, who was 80, died at his home in Brathenhall where he had been confined two weeks by heart attack. His condition had improved but a sudden relapse snuffed out his life before members of his family could reach his bedside.

One of the pioneer builders of America's great steel industry, Mather as senior partner of Pickands, Mather & Company was head of the second greatest iron ore industrial concern in the country. In addition he was reputed to be the second largest individual stockholder in the United States Steel corporation which he represented on the board of directors.

In the field of charity, he was Cleveland's greatest donor. His donations were estimated to have approached $8,000,000. To the community fund alone, of which he was honorary chairman, he had contributed at the close of the twelfth annual campaign in 1930, $1,500,000. As a token of respect, all flags on city buildings were flown at half mast.

29 INDICTED FOR N. Y. BANK FAILURE

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 19—State Banking Superintendent Joseph Broderick and 28 officers of the Bank of United States were indicted today.

Three indictments were returned against Broderick, two charging neglect of duty and a third charging conspiracy. The indictments were returned by the January grand jury which has been hearing the failure of the Bank of United States.

Kidnaped Man Forced To Open Theater Safe

F. A. Williams Thrown from Car by Abductors Near Airport; Pair Takes $300 in Daring Holdup; Make Escape.

After abducting the manager and forcing him to open the safe, two men last midnight escaped with more than $300 in cash, the Saturday and Sunday receipts of the Marion theater on west Center street.

Fred A. Williams, manager of the theater, told authorities he was seized by two men as he was about to enter his home on west Center street after closing the theater last night. They forced him into an automobile, drove to the theater and there compelled him to open the theater, enter his office and open the safe.

The men again took Williams in their automobile, driving out the Waterworks road where they threw him from the car near the airport. He walked back to Marion and reported his experience to police. He was slightly injured by his captors.

The holdup was one of the most daring staged in the uptown district in years and bore the first semblance of racketeer influence the city has seen. The men were armed, but were not masked, leading authorities to suspect that outside racketeers, in a carefully planned holdup, swooped into the city, held up the theater and escaped to a larger city where their identity can be concealed.

Williams told police he believed he could identify the men.

Palace Once Burglarized

The holdup was the second time robbers and burglars have located Marion theaters. Two years ago, the Palace theater was burglarized and approximately $1,200 was taken from the safe.

Both the Palace and Marion theaters are Publix playhouses.

GUNMEN STAGE DARING RAID

Gloucester, O., Postmaster Abducted from Home and Forced To Open Safe.

LOSS TOTALS ABOUT $500

One Bandit Guards Victim's Family While Four Obtain Loot.

By The Associated Press

GLOUCESTER, O., Oct. 19—Five men raided the home of H. F. Hambel, postmaster here, last night, took him from his family to the postoffice, forced him to open the safe, and then escorted him back home before they fled from the town.

Not a shot was fired during the raid.

The men escaped by automobile with between $400 and $500 in cash and stamps.

Hambel and his family were preparing for bed at 10:30 last night when a young man knocked at the door. Hambel answered, and was ordered back at gun-point. While the man and two companions entered, a fourth stood guard at the back door, and a fifth remained in an automobile outside. All displayed weapons. "They had plenty of them," the postmaster said. He reported seeing a machine gun in the automobile.

One of the raiders disconnected the telephone, and then the postmaster was forced to accompany four of the men to the postoffice, while the fifth bandit remained on guard over Mrs. Hambel and her two children. The street on which the Hambel home stands has no street-lights, and Hambel said he was so well guarded that he had neither opportunity to get the license number of the bandit car or to warn others of his plight.

At the postoffice a mile away he was forced to open the safe and then stand helplessly by while the four rifled it. That done, he was hustled into the automobile once more, and then forced out at his home while the fifth member of the gang leaped aboard and the car roared away.

6 ESCAPED INMATES OF JAIL ARE SOUGHT

Police Capture One of Seven Who Fled Coshocton Prison Sunday.

By The Associated Press

COSHOCTON, O., Oct. 19—Six of seven men who escaped from the Coshocton county jail were being hunted today.

One of them was recaptured at West Lafayette, six miles east of here.

Sheriff J. R. Stofer said the jail, which has six cells to house 20 prisoners, was in charge of a trusty at the time of the escape. The seven prisoners made their way to the cellar late yesterday and quietly broke a lock.

The fleeing prisoners were Jesse and Harry Mayior, brothers, who were to have started serving terms in the Mansfield reformatory today for burglary; Clarence and Ray Mueller of Zanesville, brothers awaiting grand jury action on burglary charges, Andrew and Harry Sisek, also brothers, awaiting grand jury action on similar charges; and Warren Lattimer who had pleaded guilty to burglary. One of the Keyser brothers was the man recaptured, Sheriff Stofer said.

IN DEATH'S HALL OF FAME

THOMAS ALVA EDISON

Discovery at Age of Eight Started Edison on Way to Fame as Inventor

By United Press

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 19—Thomas Alva Edison, whose name has become synonymous with world progress and whose more than a thousand inventions have given safety, comfort and entertainment to millions, was born in Milan, Ohio, Feb. 11, 1847, the son of Samuel and Nancy Edison.

He was not especially brilliant in school and in his own words was "usually at the foot of the class." One teacher went so far as to call him "addled." After a year at school his mother decided to teach him at home. As a result, before he was 12, he had been made to digest such intellectual fare as Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Sears "History of the World," "Dictionary of Sciences," and Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy."

Edison first became interested in invention when at eight he discovered what propelled a locomotive. Next he became fascinated by chemistry after trying an experiment described in a text book. In order to buy chemicals for his gradually growing laboratory he negotiated a franchise from the Grand Trunk railway to sell newspapers, peanuts and candy on the Port Huron-Detroit line.

Laboratory in Baggage Car

Finding it difficult to pursue his tricks and chemical experiments at the same time the youthful "candy butcher," without discontinuing the matter of rent with the postoffice department, coolly set up a laboratory in a baggage car.

The young "squatter" tactily was permitted to conduct his experiments until one day a jerk of the train shook a tube of phosphorus from its rack and set fire to the baggage car. This annoyed the baggageman no end, and he promptly cuffed Edison's ears, an act which some early biographers say resulted in his partial deafness.

Shortly thereafter Edison took up journalism as a career. He set up a handpress in the baggage car of a Grand Trunk express and began publication of the Grand Trunk Herald, the only newspaper known to have been written and published on the train. He abandoned this venture, however, after a man threw him into the St. Clair River because of an objectionable item.

Fate then guided Edison into

AKRON SUCCESSFULLY PASSES NAVY TESTS

Inspection Board Recommends Acceptance of Giant Ship.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19—The naval inspection board has recommended to Secretary Adams that the airship Akron be accepted.

Rear Admiral George C. Day, chief of the board, messaged the navy department today from Akron, O., that the tests were satisfactory. He asked that the acceptance of the ship go through immediately.

Acceptance of the ship, in accordance with navy practice, probably will be provisional for a period of six months. The Akron is somewhat over-weight and has not made the full rated speed.

As soon as the Akron is accepted, the navy's final opportunity to cancel the contract for construction of the ZRS-5, sister ship of the Akron, will expire and the Goodyear company will be free to proceed on immediate construction, using funds already appropriated.

AKRON, O., Oct. 19—Navy officials here today said the U. S. S. Akron might make her delivery flight to Lakehurst Wednesday, weather permitting. The announcement followed word from Washington that the board of inspection and survey had recommended acceptance of the airship.

The Akron's final test—a 48-hour flight over the middlewest to determine her general sea worthiness—ended at 7:08 (Marion time) yesterday.

CAPONE RULE NEARING END

Prison Doors Yawn for Gangster, Convicted of Federal Tax Fraud.

By International News Service

CHICAGO, Oct. 19—Prison doors yawn for Al Capone. His reign as the most powerful gang chieftain of modern times is nearing an end. He probably will be sentenced to the penitentiary tomorrow by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson on his conviction of attempting to defraud the United States government out of income taxes.

The length of Capone's sentence was a matter of widespread speculation today, not only in Chicago but throughout the nation. The judge's sentence will be one of the most significant pronouncements ever handed down from a federal bench in a criminal prosecution.

Judge Wilkerson has it within his power to put Capone behind the bars for 17 years—or until he is 49 years of age. By that time the Capone of today would be but a memory to a new generation.

Capone is confronted with a possible maximum sentence of 15 years in a federal penitentiary, plus two years in the county jail, and fines aggregating $50,000 on his conviction of three felonies and two misdemeanors by a jury late Saturday night.

The verdict of the jury was a stunning blow to Capone. It was a distinct shock to the underworld of Chicago where Capone was regarded as all powerful. He had outlasted five chiefs of police in Chicago and survived innumerable investigations and reform crusades. Up to now he had been Capone, "the immune."

It is the possible long term prison sentence, not the $50,000 in fines, that is worrying Capone. He doubtless would experience little difficulty raising the "fifty grand." The prison sentence, however, is under [illegible] of spite.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 19 — The court move to Al Capone's fight to keep out of the penitentiary is up to the gang chief himself, and his attorneys have indicated it will be a matter of a very brief delay. Attorney Abram Frank for Al Capone said he believes the motion to be overruled, and that Capone, should have his sentence of 15 years [illegible]

Death of Edison Takes Another of Famous 'Cronies'

The death of Thomas A. Edison recalls the close bond of friendship existing between the late President Warren G. Harding, Mr. Edison, Harvey E. Firestone and Henry Ford.

Former President Harding was a personal friend of Mr. Firestone, and shortly after he became President of the United States he was drawn into the close circle of friendship of the nationally known "cronies."

The late President went on several camping trips with the famous trio. The four were photographed together on several occasions when their jaunts to the woods became known to news cameramen.

When the President died in 1923, Edison, Ford and Firestone were among the thousands of friends who traveled to Marion to attend the funeral.

By The Associated Press

POMEROY, O., Oct. 19—Fire, believed to have started from defective wiring, destroyed four business establishments here early today with a loss estimated at $100,000.

Starting in the Ewing grocery store the fire ate its way through the Red Anchor department store, the Ansel restaurant, Pomeroy bargain center and Eberhart hardware store. The blackened debris of these story buildings on Main street, which faces the Ohio river. Several families living in apartments above the grocery and hardware stores, were forced into the street.

For a time it seemed as though the entire business section of the city was doomed and fire departments were summoned from Point Pleasant, W. Va., Gallipolis, Rutland and Middleport.

Starting shortly after 3 a. m. the blaze was brought under control at 8 o'clock.

No one was believed injured in the conflagration but officials began searching the fire debris as soon as the blaze was brought under control this morning.

One of the residents of the apartments was Dr. Amy Whaley, 94, said to be the oldest living dentist in the United States. He was rescued from the fire hose and carried to safety on a cot.

HOOVER OPENS DRIVE TO AID UNEMPLOYED

Pleads for Neighbor-to-Neighbor Spirit in Nationwide Radio Address.

By United Press

FORTRESS MONROE, Va., Oct. 19—Officially opening the nationwide drive for unemployment relief funds from now until Thanksgiving day, President Hoover made an appeal to his countrymen last night to help lift the needy out of their misery.

Mr. Hoover interrupted his week-end cruise to Yorktown to come ashore here to make the address, which was delivered into a microphone set up in the home of Brig. Gen. Stanley D. Embrick, commander of the fort.

"The possible misery of helpless people gives me more concern than any other trouble this depression has brought us," the President said.

Calling for a neighbor-to-neighbor spirit to help the men in distress, Mr. Hoover asked that the local relief quotas be filled so that Thanksgiving day can be a day of great rejoicing.

"This organized effort is our opportunity to express our sympathy to lighten the burden of the heavy laden, and to cast aspersion into the habitations of despair," Mr. Hoover said.

BODY OF GREAT GENIUS TAKEN TO WORKROOM

Lies in State Where Years of Labor and Achievement Were Centered.

EMPLOYES VIEW BODY

Funeral To Be Wednesday, with Burial at Orange, N. J.

By The Associated Press

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 19—Surrounded by the well worn familiar objects of his daily use, the body of Thomas A. Edison lay in state today in the small and unpretentious workroom where for many years he read and thought and made experiments.

Some test tubes, bits of plate he had been using in his search for a formula for the manufacture of rubber, an old desk, many notebooks, and a blue-covered couch where he used to take his rest—these were the background. Over his casket was shed the soft radiance of what the world regards as his greatest invention, the incandescent lamp.

For an hour this morning workmen from his factory passed slowly through the little building, just off Main street. They call it "the lab." The inventor's son, Charles, was there to receive them. Later the public was admitted and a long line of men and women and children began moving through the quiet room.

The body will lie in state until Tuesday evening. There will be a private funeral service Wednesday in the Edison home in Llewellyn park, after which, according to a change of plans announced today, all that is mortal of the great inventor will be laid to rest in Rosedale cemetery, in Orange.

Soon after Edison died at 3:24 a. m. yesterday, representatives of the family announced burial would be in Milan after the funeral Wednesday. Today, however, after a family conference, it was decided to have burial here.

Body Taken to Laboratory

Edison's body was moved from his home to the library of his plant laboratory, a half-mile away, at 9:45 a. m. today.

This was done in accordance with the family's wishes that employes might first view the body of the inventor.

His body will lie there under the light of the bulbs which he invented and in the shadows of the books, maps, diagrams, stationary and blue prints which he accumulated over the 60 years that he maintained the place.

Two League Battles on Sked This Week in N. C. O. Loop

PRESIDENTS TO MEET BUCYRUS; SHELBY IS ASHLAND'S OPPONENT

Galion, Mansfield Tackle Outside Competition; Harding Seeks Revenge for 1930.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

Still smarting from a stinging 22-0 beating administered last season at the hands of Bucyrus, Harding High today started preparations for the annual conflict with the Redmen next Saturday afternoon at Fairground field. This game will comprise just half of the N. C. O. league schedule for the week, Ashland colliding with Shelby in the other league battle. Mansfield and Galion will step out of league competition for the week, the Tygers tackling Upper Sandusky on the former's home field and Galion trekking to Lima for a melee with South High of that city.

The Harding-Bucyrus conflict will hold the lion's share of the local interest this week but the battle between Ashland and Shelby will do considerable toward deciding if Ashland is really a serious contender for the title now in the possession of Mansfield.

Harding Confident

Harding team members and the supporters of the Presidents have not yet forgotten how Gene Talbott staged a one-man track meet last fall at the expense of Harding, scoring three touchdowns while the Redmen were handing the locals their most decisive league beating of the season. The Bohyermen, despite some disheartening setbacks in the last three games played, make no secret of the fact they think the little 22-0 beating of 1930 will be reversed this year.

Coach Dewey Bohyer is expected to put his charges through some stiff scrimmage sessions this week to get them ready for the invasion of the Redmen. A victory for either Bucyrus or Marion will enable them to remain in the race for a high position but a defeat for either is almost a death knell as far as a first division post is concerned.

Shelby Surprised

Before the surprise 6-0 upset which Shelby presented Galion last Saturday the Ashland encounter with the Whippets loomed as "just another football game" with the only thing at stake being the size of the score. Ashland was doped an easy winner.

It is quite possible that even though the Whippets took the measure of Galion that Ashland will have little difficulty winning this week. It may be that Galion was over-rated in pre-season dope and does not possess much real strength. Both of the Orangemen's starts to date have resulted in defeats. Regardless of whether Galion is as strong as figured, the Ashland-Shelby fray looms much tougher than expected. Jim Miller, quarterback, is back in the Shelby lineup and that adds about 50 per cent to the team.

Ashland Favored

Ashland has already chalked up two victories and has no defeats. If the Hilltoppers can get by Shelby they must be figured as the principal threat to the two-year supremacy of Mansfield. On paper "Rosie" Starn's proteges should win. On the field it may be different. That's up to Shelby.

Galion is apparently in for the third consecutive beating this week at Lima South. Mansfield should have little difficulty in disposing of Upper Sandusky.

Buckeye Coach Has Dreams of Big Ten Crown

By United Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 19—An iron-muscled, energetic young coach sat in the office at Ohio State university today, balancing dreams of a Western conference championship with the drab realization of what is before him and his team this week.

Sam S. Willaman believes Ohio State can beat Northwestern next Saturday in Ohio stadium. He saw his Buckeye warriors play an almost perfect game with Michigan and bring back to Ohio a precious 20 to 7 victory. A week before, he saw Ohio State, beaten 26 points, come back and narrow the margin to five points.

Yes, Coach Willaman believes Ohio State can match touchdowns with any football team in the business. But to win two gruelling games on successive Saturdays would be a big task for the best of them.

May Decide Title

The Ohio State-Northwestern game can easily decide the Western conference championship, Michigan and Purdue, considered strong contenders for the title, have been beaten. Illinois and Chicago were practically eliminated by defeat. Indiana, Iowa and Minnesota aren't rated very high.

Of course, Wisconsin still is in the race, but the winner of the Ohio State-Northwestern clash will be picked as the probable Big Ten champion.

Coach Willaman faces the titanic task of putting his team at the peak of mental and physical condition again. It takes a mighty sweet team to get in that shape two weeks in a row. Ohio State, once geared up, is a dangerous foe.

Willaman was greatly pleased with his team's showing against Michigan.

Did They Play?

"Didn't they play football?" he asked. "In face of adverse criticism, they had enough confidence in their coaches and their plays to go out and win. It was the team's spirit that did it."

Ohio's football relations with Northwestern have resulted in six victories for Ohio and three for Northwestern. The Evanston Wildcats have won three times in the last four years, however.

Under the Willaman regime, Ohio State's two traditional rivals, Michigan and Illinois, have not fared so well as in the past. The victory over Michigan last week gave Willaman a 3 to 2 decision over these two combined, with the Illinois game of 1931 not yet played.

LA RUE EASY WINNER OVER FOREST SCHOOL

Baker-Coached Eleven Runs Wild To Capture Fourth Straight, 41 to 0.

LaRue High school of the Heart of Ohio league will encounter what is expected to be its last serious obstacle in the path to the league championship Friday of this week when its meets Forest on the Forest gridiron. The Baker-coached eleven ran roughshod over Woodstock, one of the supposedly best teams of the circuit in a week-end game, winning 41-0. It was the fourth straight lop-sided victory for the Marion county outfit.

It was the Greenwood brothers and Gillispie that did most of the brilliant work against Woodstock. Gillespie, halfback, turned in a 40-yard dash for a touchdown in the third period, worming his way through almost the entire Woodstock team during the jaunt. R. Greenwood raced 70 yards to score on the first play of the second half.

Eagle chalked up 10 first downs to seven for the losers. The only detriment in which the winners were outclassed was in forward passing. Woodstock completed eight aerials. Most of them were for short gains and provided only a slight scoring threat.

OHIO, NORTHWESTERN TO CLASH SATURDAY

Winner Will Be Heavy Favorite To Cop Big Ten Grid Championship.

BY WILLIAM WEEKES,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19—The Western conference football season is less than half over, but the dope already is all scrambled up, the experts are groggy and the title may be decided Saturday at Columbus, O.

On Saturday in Ohio State's huge stadium, the sensational Buckeyes, victor over one of the Big Ten's 1930 co-champions, Michigan, last Saturday, will tackle the other one, Northwestern, and the conqueror will be a lop-sided favorite to win the championship.

Every member of the league will be in action Saturday.

Michigan will attempt to repair its battered fortunes at the expense of Illinois at Champaign. Chicago will meet Indiana at Chicago, and Minnesota will open its campaign against Iowa at Minneapolis.

Purdue and Wisconsin will go east, the Boilermakers to tackle Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh and the Badgers to Philadelphia to try for their second straight triumph over Pennsylvania. Notre Dame will be host to Pittsburgh.

Ohio State and Wisconsin knocked the experts groggy Saturday. The Buckeyes have been promising to do big things for several years, but following repeated failures, were not expected to do much against Michigan. When the battle was over, Michigan was virtually out of the championship picture and Ohio was riding on the crest of a 20 to 7 triumph.

Boilermakers Upset

Wisconsin also had been guilty of disappointing the dopesters and Purdue was a standout favorite to whip the Badgers. Three Badger touchdowns in the first 10 minutes left the Boilermakers just too much of a handicap and Wisconsin won 21 to 14. Iowa and Indiana struggled to a scoreless tie at Iowa City, while Northwestern trimmed California's southern branch outfit, 19 to 0, after a ragged start.

Chicago failed to make any kind of a stand against Albie Booth and a smart Yale eleven, and the men of Eli made their first invasion of the midwest a winning one to the tune of 27 to 0. Illinois used Bradley college for experimental purposes and won, 20 to 0.

Negro Teams To Play.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 19—Two Negro college football teams, Tuskegee Institute, and Wilberforce university of Ohio will meet at Milla stadium Saturday.

NOTRE DAME ELEVEN TO BATTLE UNBEATEN PANTHERS SATURDAY

Game Is Standout Struggle of Heavy Intersectional Schedule.

BY HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 19—The east will be the heaviest contributor this week to the most comprehensive intersectional slate of football season.

Nine major eastern elevens are booked for contests against teams from other sections.

Pitt's Panthers must tackle Notre Dame in the Ramblers' stronghold at South Bend. Pitt has won four straight games, and boasts an uncrossed goal line.

Harvard Plays Texas

Harvard, fresh from its thrilling victory over Army, will stay at home to entertain the Texas Longhorns, 1930 champions of the Southwest conference. Carnegie Tech battles Purdue's Boilermakers while Penn is seeing what it can do about checking Wisconsin's crackling defense. Both these games will be played in the east. Fordham takes on Drake of the Missouri valley conference and Boston college tangles with Marquette.

Accompanying Pittsburgh into the midwest will be West Virginia and Georgetown. West Virginia will clash with Detroit while Georgetown faces Michigan State, but despite the heavy intersectional slate all along the line there are outstanding intra-sectional or conference games. Here is the layout briefly.

Ohio Tackles Wildcats

Big Ten: Northwestern and Ohio State at Columbus in crucial conference game. Ohio State conquered Michigan last Saturday 20 to 7, but a Northwestern victory is indicated. Michigan, to win over Illinois. Indiana and Chicago are paired in another conference battle and Minnesota starts its "league" season against Iowa.

East: Army clashes with Yale. Another outstanding contest will pit Colgate against New York University, both undefeated and untied. Navy will be favored over Princeton and Syracuse should dispose of Penn State.

Southern Conference: Tennessee, Tulane and Georgia, outstanding contenders at present, all should win.

Pacific Coast: Southern California, with three straight victories, looks much too strong for California.

Rocky Mountain Conference: Utah Aggies, with three victories leads the rest, but Utah, defending champion, remains the favorite.

Monnett Leads Scorers.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 19—Bob Monnett of Bucyrus, fleet halfback of Michigan State has taken the lead in the national football scoring race. Monnett has scored 11 touchdowns and kicked 18 points after touchdown for a total of 84 points and a one-point lead over Louis Bush, 145-pound sophomore at Massachusetts State. Bush has tallied 13 touchdowns and booted five points after touchdown.

Radnor Beats Ashley.

Radnor High school football team defeated Ashley High in a Friday afternoon game 21 to 0. Mayo scored two and Bolt one touchdown to account for 18 of Radnor's points. Radnor converted all three extra points.

Wrestles Here Tonight

Cyclonic Action Likely in Mat Program Tonight

Another of the thrilling action mat cards which has afforded local mat fans real entertainment in the last two weeks will be on tap at Shovel gym tonight with the cyclonic Pacific coast welterweight, Robin Reed of Reedsport, Ore., mauling Alex Williams of New York City in the two best out of three falls main event.

Reed in making his initial bow to the local wrestling public on last Monday night established himself here as possibly the greatest piece of wrestling machinery that has ever set foot on the Shovel gym mat and the largest crowd of the indoor mat season is expected to trek to the gym tonight to see him swing into action in his second consecutive start here.

The former A. A. U. and Olympic champion is very apt to catch a tartar when he goes against the easterner, Williams. Alex, a veteran of many mat battles, is a rough, rugged old war horse of the mat, and learned his wrestling in the old school where it was "devil take the hindmost." Williams has learned that to run second is equivalent to accepting defeat and it is likely that he'll tear into Reed tonight and endeavor to take the lead away from the coast boy right from the start.

It should be a grueling engagement.

The semi-final also looks on paper like a great match with Nick Buzinis, the New Jersey Demon, scheduled to tangle with Jack Murphy, Irish lightheavyweight from Denver, Colo.

SHELBY IN SURPRISE WIN OVER GALION 6-0

Defeat Eliminates Orangemen from Consideration for League Crown.

If Galion High school ever had any hopes of ending the two-year reign of Mansfield at the head of the N. C. O. league, Shelby rudely but effectively shattered them beyond repair Saturday by trimming the Orangemen 6-0. Mansfield had already beaten the McClintock-coached elven in the league opener a week previous. The defeat by Shelby eliminates Galion from consideration for the league gonfalon.

Jim Miller led the Whippets to victory over the Orangemen, scoring the single touchdown of the game in the second quarter and playing a brilliant defensive game to keep Galion from scoring late in the final period. Miller stood behind his own goal and booted the ball to mid-field with three minutes playing time left, breaking up a threatened Orangemen score.

Galion was handicapped considerably by the loss of Goldsmith, veteran fullback, who was injured in the fray with Mansfield recently.

BISHOPS, BOBCATS TO MEET STRONG FOES IN B. A. A. CONTESTS

Heidelberg Tackles Muskingum in Feature Game of Ohio Conference.

By The Associated Press

Ohio elevens will get down to the serious business of chasing honors within their various groups.

The Buckeye Athletic association will have its heaviest Saturday so far, with three conference games on the schedule. Ohio University, the defending champions, will take on Cincinnati, which crushed Marietta 50 to 0 last Saturday. Ohio proved its mettle by turning back Simpson of Iowa, 22 to 0.

Ohio Wesleyan knocked Denison out of the title race by a 25 to 6 count and next meets Miami, which stepped out with an impressive 25 to 0 decision over Georgetown of Kentucky. Denison will face Wabash.

Wooster Undefeated

Wooster kept this undefeated record clean with an unexpectedly decisive victory over Akron, 25 to 7, and ought to come through the Oberlin game in still better fashion. Oberlin dropped a 24 to 2 game to Case.

Case meets Akron Saturday.

Western Reserve, pronounced by Pittsburgh, hopes to break into the win column at the expense of Hiram college, which lost to Ohio Northern 6 to 0. Northern will battle Otterbein, 20 to 6 conqueror of Capital. Heidelberg, which smothered Ashland 40 to 0, will meet Muskingum in one of the featured games of the week-end.

Kenyon to New York

Besides Denison's trip to Wabash, five other games will find Ohio teams traveling out of the state. Kenyon will go to Geneva, N. Y., to tackle Hobart; Marietta will mix with Marshall. Findlay will try its luck at Detroit City college; Baldwin-Wallace, 14 to 0 victory over Kenyon, will meet Rochester; and little Rio Grande will meet Bluefield (W. Va.).

Bluffton and Bowling Green, the latter unbeaten since the early part of 1929 will stage the lone Northwest Ohio conference game.

Five games are on the Friday night card, topped by the Heidelberg-Muskingum fracas. John Carroll figures on a comfortable evening with Wilmington, beaten 21 to 6 by West Liberty of Indiana. Mount Union will play Ashland, Xavier will test Wittenberg and Butler will meet Dayton.

TOOTS AND CASPER — BY JIMMY MURPHY

A GIRL FRIEND OF MINE GAVE ME A TIP ON 'ABERDABER COMMON,' CASPER! SKIP OVER TO YOUR BROKERS AND BUY ME TWENTY SHARES! IT'S QUOTED AT FIVE DOLLARS A SHARE TODAY!

HERE YOU ARE-HERE'S A HUNDRED DOLLARS EVEN, IN PENNIES NICKELS, DIMES, AND QUARTERS! IT'S A FUND I SAVED UP!
IF YOU WANT TO INVEST IN STOCKS I'LL TELL YOU WHAT TO BUY! YOU DON'T HAVE TO GO OUTSIDE OF OUR FAMILY FOR FINANCIAL ADVICE!
I DON'T WANT YOUR ADVICE! MY GIRL FRIEND SAID THAT 'ABERDABER COMMON' IS GOING SKY HIGH, SO HURRY AND BUY ME TWENTY SHARES BEFORE IT GOES UP!
I DON'T THINK MUCH OF 'ABERDABER COMMON,' AND I WON'T BUY THE STOCK FOR TOOTS, BUT I'LL LET HER THINK I DID! IF IT GOES DOWN SHE'LL BE TICKLED WHEN I TELL HER I DIDN'T BUY IT! SHE'LL HAVE TO ADMIT I'M A SMART GUY! I COULD TELL HER ABOUT LOTS OF STOCKS TO INVEST THIS MONEY IN BUT SHE WON'T LISTEN TO ME. AND YOU CAN'T ARGUE WITH A WOMAN!

There Are Plenty of Buyers for Automobiles And An Ad Here Will Find Them

You want to sell your car? Alright! Place an ad in The Star's Classified Section. Describe the car completely. Make arrangements to offer your prospect terms and quote him a fair price. If your prospect has a car to trade—trade him. A Star ad will find prospects for the trade-in.

Don't think the automotive market is dead simply because you can't sell your car—unless you advertise, the buyers won't know your car is for sale.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meat, Grain, Livestock

Last night's heavy frost combined with Saturday's large demand was expected to almost completely remove homegrown fresh vegetables from local markets. Shipped-in supplies will be coming in within a week or two, dealers say, to replace the supply. Lima beans, cantaloupes, homegrown strawberries, tomatoes, green beans, and similar articles are included in this group.

Best quality lemons are selling at 48 cents a dozen at most markets with a good demand reported. Kale is still in fair demand with the supply and quality reported good. The price is two pounds for 15 cents on many markets.

Endive is slightly lower in price, with many dealers asking 10 cents a pound for good quality. The demand is reported fair.

Black walnuts, recently on the market, are bringing five cents a pound at many markets. The mixed variety is selling for 27 cents a pound and includes Brazil nuts, pecans, hazlenuts, English walnuts and almonds.

GRAIN PRICES GET SETBACK

Show of Firmness at Opening Gives Way to Decline Later.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 19 — Wheat prices underwent an early setback today after a show of firmness at the start. Word of increased stocks of wheat at Liverpool was a handicap to bulls.

Opening unchanged to ¾ cents up, wheat later declined all around to below Saturday's finish. Corn started a shade lower to ¼ higher and subsequently sagged.

Tending at times to impart strength to wheat was a Paris cable saying the French government through the Laval commission would negotiate for purchase of American farm board wheat, and that it was thought the amount would be in excess of 50,000,000 bushels. Effort to confirm the report were without avail.

Wheat bulls put stress on a dispatch from continental Europe to a Chicago exporter asserting the general European situation was more healthy, and that Germany's improved political outlook was helping everything.

Corn and oats followed wheat market changes.

300 ATTEND PARTY RALLY

Republicans at Picnic in Garfield Park Pavilion; Mouser, Miss Jones Speak.

One of the most enthusiastic political gatherings of the year was staged Saturday afternoon when Marion Republican voters met in Garfield park to hear two addresses, meet their candidates, and warm up political interest in the approaching city election, Nov. 3. Three hundred Republican voters turned out for the picnic despite the chill of the afternoon.

The country is fortunate in having such a man as President Hoover at its head during these times of economic distress, Miss Gertrude Jones of Findlay, district Republican committeewoman, declared in one of the two addresses featuring the meeting. Miss Jones praised President Hoover for decisive action towards remedying the world's ailments, pointing to his recent financial plan and the moratorium of war debts as evidences of his masterful way of handling unusual situations.

Any president can be a great man when conditions are favorable and the affairs of the country are running along smoothly, the speaker declared, but Mr. Hoover has proved himself great and masterful by taking definite steps to meet troublesome problems.

Miss Jones' talk was confined to national affairs. Congressman Grant E. Mouser, Jr., was the other speaker of the afternoon.

Congressman Mouser also touched on the national political aspects, explaining what is being done to relieve commerce and economic conditions generally.

He also said the party was fortunate in obtaining a popular and commendable list of candidates in the field for municipal offices.

Republican candidates for city offices, headed by W. C. Phillians, candidate for mayor, were introduced by W. N. Harder, vice president of the county executive committee, who spoke briefly. Each candidate responded with remarks. Mr. Harder presided during the afternoon except for the business session of the Marion County Chapter, Ohio Council of Republican Women, early in the afternoon. Mrs. French Crow, president, had charge of this business session. She introduced Mrs. Emma Voorhees, and Mrs. H. K. Henderson, past presidents. Mrs. Eugene Moore had charge of community singing.

A women's quartet sang several numbers.

A telegram from Mrs. Elsie Bennett Wilson of Medina, president of the Ohio Council of Republican Women, expressing regret at her inability to attend the meeting, was read.

A hot supper was served by women of the Marion County Chapter, who sponsored the picnic meeting. The hall was decorated in keeping with the Hallowe'en season.

Are they as good as when the ruffles came down to the ankles?

GOOD? . . . You bet they are! Maybe the girls are even better. Anyhow, cigarettes are a whole lot better. No doubt about that.

They used to be made by hand—
Now it's machines; no hand but yours ever touches them.

They used to be packed in expensive, highfalutin' cardboard boxes—
Now the quality is in the cigarettes.

The U. S. Revenue Tax used to be a penny a package of twenty—
Now it's six cents a package of twenty.

Tobacco used to be dried by air—
Now Liggett & Myers alone has thirty-five drying machines of the latest type, with a daily capacity of over 2,000,000 pounds—and over four miles of warehouses for tobacco storage.

BETTER—they're miles better! Everything used in the manufacture of Chesterfield cigarettes is the best that money can buy or that Science knows about.

CHESTERFIELD TOBACCOS—both Turkish and Domestic—are mild and ripe, the best that money can buy.

AND THE WAY Chesterfield tobaccos are blended and cross-blended is like making a new and better-tasting kind of tobacco, with greater smoothness, more mildness and a more pleasing aroma—a fragrance and flavor not to be found in any other cigarette.

CHESTERFIELD gives you the benefit of all the world knows about the production of better cigarettes. Nobody smokes a better cigarette than Chesterfield.

EDISON'S GENIUS HAD EARLY START

Discovery at Age of Eight First Evidence of Inventive Mind.

telegraphy. He rescued the child of the Mt. Clemens station master from under the wheels of the train, and the father, in gratitude, gave Edison an opportunity to study telegraphy in the station. When he had become a proficient telegrapher he was made station agent at Port Huron.

First Invention

Because he spent most of the night experimenting, he used to sleep on his job a good part of the time. Caught napping several times, Edison was instructed to signal the letter "A" once every hour to another station to prove he was awake. This order led Edison to his first serious invention. He devised an apparatus which automatically clicked out the letter "A" on the hour. The invention worked flawlessly until he was caught sleeping, when he was fired.

After working as telegrapher along the Mississippi valley, he came to New York in September, 1869, without friends or money. Three or four days after his arrival, on Sept. 24, 1869, the stock market collapsed. Panic ensued. The day became historic in Wall Street as Black Friday. On that day, as in more recent times, the stock ticker was an hour behind the market. Edison examined the apparatus and decided he could vastly improve it.

Perfected Stock Ticker

He perfected a ticker within three months and took it to Marshall Lefferts, president of the Western Union, determined to ask as much as $5,000 for it, but ready to accept $3,000 if it were offered. Lefferts tested the ticker and found it more than satisfactory. Then to Edison's amusement, Lefferts asked if he would accept $40,000.

Thus happily situated Edison settled down to improving existing inventions and developing ideas which he had fostered for years. He perfected an invention which permitted the transmission of four messages on the same wire, two in each direction. Edison helped Alexander Graham Bell make the telephone a more efficient instrument and his carbon transmitter is still in use today. He also invented the electromotograph a sound amplifier which was the forerunner of the modern microphone.

With the money realized from his inventions he went to Menlo Park, N. J., in 1870 purchased an old building, gathered about him a corps of workmen and assistants and developed a laboratory that was unequalled in its day. It was here that Edison nurtured and realized his hope to one day bottle the hitherto elusive electric light.

During his first years at Menlo Park, Edison maintained his interest in the science of sound. A toy, built purely to amuse his assistants, led him to invent the phonograph. The toy consisted of a paper figure of a man which he set in motion by shouting into a funnel. Edison noticed that the paper man moved fast or slow, according to the force of the voice. He decided then to imprison the vibrations of the voice and reproduce them. He experimented for months and then one day in 1878 Edison decided to put it to a test.

Mary First Word

So, while John Krusi, an old German and one of Edison's favorite workmen, watched interestedly but frankly skeptical, the inventor started a tin-foil covered cylinder revolving, placed a needle on it, and then shouted through the horn: "Mary," the first word of his favorite bit of poetry—"Mary Had a Little Lamb." John shook his head doubtfully. Once again Edison put the cylinder in motion, replaced the needle and there issued from the cylinder, faintly, the word "Mary" in Edison's voice.

"Mein Gott in Himmel!" exclaimed the old workman. Not many months later John's words were echoed by the world. The "Wizard of Menlo Park," the press and public hailed him. Some scientists, however, smiled. Edison, they intimated, was a plain charlatan. It was impossible, they argued, to preserve sounds and reproduce them. They changed their minds very soon.

It was about this time Edison became interested in light. The inventor came to the conclusion that illumination in the latter part of the 19th century had made little progress since the Stone Age. There were kerosene lamps and some gaslight, but in his opinion they were little better than the fagots of the cave man or the tallow and wax candles of medieval times.

Bottling Electricity

The idea of bottling electricity for illumination purposes challenged Edison. Gathering some of his most able workmen around him, Edison explained his hopes—to create an electric light that would burn indefinitely within a glass bulb. And so they set out to accomplish what countless scientists had declared was impossible. Finally, on Oct. 21, 1879, after spending $40,000, and after personally conducting more than 16,000 tests of various materials in his quest for a satisfactory lamp filament, the by now almost totally discouraged Edison met with success. He had succeeded in carbonizing a length of cotton sewing thread, which, when placed in an airtight glass bulb, burned for 40 hours. Subsequently, Edison, spurred by this achievement, improved the lamp so that it became commercially practicable.

But Edison was by no means through after his arduous months of experimentation. There yet remained the problem of furnishing power to homes if electric-lighting was to become general. It meant that existing dynamos had to be vastly improved. He set to work on this project and finally, in 1882, Edison witnessed the final consummation of his dream when the first central power station was opened in New York City.

Two years later, Edison made one brief excursion into the field of aeronautics in response to James Gordon Bennett's offer of a $1,000 prize for a flying machine. He worked along the rocket principle of propulsion. The inventor devised an 80-pound machine, equipped with a cylinder in which nitroglycerin soaked reels of ticker-tape were fed and exploded by a spark. The machine managed to rise a few feet above the ground on its first test and then exploded. Edison's hair and eyebrows were singed and a workman nearly killed.

Argument Leads to Movie Camera

An argument concerning horses led Edison to contrive the first successful motion picture machine. Governor Leland Stanford of California in order to prove his contention that a running horse landed all four feet on the ground simultaneously, had a photographer set up 40 cameras in a row and snapped a horse in motion. Stanford was right.

Edison saw the photographs and decided to reproduce the human figure in motion. In 1891 Edison finally devised a workable machine. At first he was strongly opposed to projecting pictures on the screen. He argued in favor of the slot machine because it was his opinion the country could not support more than half a dozen motion picture theaters with screen.

The outbreak of the World war stirred anew Edison's inventive genius. Finding it difficult to obtain carbolic acid for his own uses, he discovered a way to make it synthetically.

When the United States entered the war, Edison, moved by patriotism, worked more strenuously than at any time in his life. One after another various devices his country could use against the enemy came from his laboratory. He became head of the Naval Consulting Board and directed the work of producing many new implements of war.

After the war he adventured in the mysteries of producing rubber from weeds and in recent years devoted most of his time to experimenting in Florida. It was his hope to develop a cheap and practical rubber that could be grown on American soil so that if there should be another war this country's rubber supply will not be imperiled.

Edison was married twice, his first wife dying in 1884, leaving three children, Thomas Alva, Jr., William Leslie and Marion Estelle. He was married two years later to the present Mrs. Edison, the former Miss Mina Miller. There are three children of this marriage, Charles, Madeline and Theodore. Charles today is actual head of the Edison plant at West Orange.

TO PLACE WREATH ON HARDING TOMB

Columbus Sons of Union Veterans To Pay Tribute.

Gov. Dennison Camp No. 1, Sons of Union Veterans, of Columbus has been asked by the national department of the organization to take charge of ceremonies when a wreath is placed on the grave of former President Harding next month. The ceremony has been scheduled for 2:30 p. m. on Sunday, Nov. 1. President Harding's birthday anniversary is Nov. 2.

The organization each year places a wreath on the grave of all former presidents on their birthday anniversary. Arrangements for the ceremony were made by J. W. Wilder, secretary and treasurer of the Columbus camp, in correspondence with Hoke Donithen, secretary of the Harding Memorial association.

Cincinnati Boy Scouts each year send two Scouts to Marion with a wreath to be placed on the late president's grave.

"Go Forward!" Edison's Last Word to Nation

By The Associated Press

Last June, Thomas A. Edison spoke to the nation over the radio. It was his last public utterance and was marked by his usual brevity. He said: "My message to you is: Be courageous! I have lived a long time. I have seen history repeat itself again and again. I have seen many depressions in business. Always America has emerged from them stronger and more prosperous. Be as brave as your fathers were before you. Have faith! Go forward!"

* * *

It was two years ago that Mr. Edison collapsed in Detroit during a celebration honoring him for his invention of the electric light.

A hurried search has revealed that Edison, inventor of the sound recording device, left no permanent record of his own voice.

* * *

Dr. Samuel W. Stratton, former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was asked by newspapermen to comment upon Mr. Edison's career. As he was dictating his tribute, he died.

* * *

The kindly face of Thomas A. Edison, known wherever in the world his inventive imagination made life more comfortable, is to be immortalized in a death mask, it became known today. A sculptor was permitted to take an impression of Edison's face just before his body was moved from the home to the library of the laboratory where it lay in state today.

Highway Opened.

MT. GILEAD, Oct. 19—A detour which has been used for almost one and a half years has been removed with the opening of route 42 east of here. The improvement now completed includes a new concrete bridge over the Whetstone river and a stretch of new pavement from the end of the brick pavement in Union street here to the farm of T. W. Zulauf one mile east of town.

Edison Hoped for 5 More Years To Complete Work

By United Press

WEST ORANGE, N. J.—On the afternoon of March 17, 1930, Thomas Alva Edison stood in the Florida sunshine, and, on a tattered piece of paper, addressed a plea to God, asking for five more years of life.

He wanted it, not because he was afraid to die, but because his work, which was his religion as well, was unfinished. In the crowded 83 years of his life he had brought the almost limitless forces of electricity within the reach of any child able to push a button; he had instilled voices in wooden boxes and made it possible to preserve the arias of a Caruso; he had cut down time and space, linked hemispheres with the thread of a telephone wire; he had channeled the earth's ether waves and turned night into day.

But his death came in the midst of his most perplexing experiment. Waving aside the laws of the vegetable kingdom, he had sought to make the common golden-rod perform functions for which it was never intended. He wanted to extract from it rubber, a commodity of ever-increasing importance to a motorized world.

Asks for Five Years More

"Give me five more years," he scribbled on that March day, "and the United States will have a rubber crop that can be utilized in 12 months' time."

It was characteristic of Edison that he should die disappointed, because for him yesterday's triumph became significant in the excitement of tomorrow's possibilities.

Edison violated virtually every canon in the typical American formula except two—he was a poor boy and he worked hard.

Some of his violations of the code:

He quit school as soon as possible and was at the foot of the class as long as he remained.

He chewed and smoked.

He was careless of his personal appearance.

He was discharged frequently from various jobs.

He turned his inventive talent, in his early years, to cheating his employers out of working time.

He was careless of personal property and frequently endangered lives with his chemical experiments.

He scoffed at persons who insisted on getting the conventional eight hours' sleep a night.

Many Eccentricities

Edison evinced many of the eccentricities and contradictions commonly associated with genius. He was addicted to heavy, black cigars, but would not permit anyone who worked for him to smoke cigarets. His knowledge of and interest in rudimentary business transactions were of slight that at 26 he did not know how to cash a check, and when someone showed him how he took $40,000 obtained for his inventions on a market quotation machine, in $5 and $10 bills and sat up with it all night because he did not know how to open a bank account.

clusive battles in the history of the world, asserting that had it not been won the whole course of history would have been altered.

"The primary national consequence of the independence we finally won here," Mr. Hoover said, "was the release of our national minds from all hampering restraint put upon us by subjection to another nation and an older civilization. * * * * here America became free to be America."

Praises French

The President paid tribute to the aid lent the struggling colonists by France, calling by name Degrasse, LaFayette and Rochambeau. He spoke also of Marshal Petain, who listened as he talked.

Through a mighty armada of modern and ancient warcraft, the battleship Arkansas brought President Hoover to the sesquicentennial celebration today while guns from the more than 20 warships roared their 21-gun salutes to the commander-in-chief of the army and navy.

The cannonading began shortly after 8 a. m., as the Arkansas steamed slowly up the York river between sleek, gray vessels of the scouting force, flying the French tri-color and American flags, and with full crews at attention along the rails.

Before landing in a launch to go ashore his address, the President arranged to receive Marshal Petain and Ambassador Claudel of France, and Vice Admiral A. L. Willard, senior naval officer of the Yorktown fleet.

MILAN IN MOURNING

Ohio Village Where Edison Was Born Lowers Flag.

By The Associated Press

MILAN, O., Oct. 19—This village where Thomas A. Edison was born tpday publicly mourned his death and lowered the American flag to half staff in the Milan public square.

Although Edison spent his boyhood days and started to school here, only one resident remains who remembers him as a child. She is Mrs. Julia C. Felton, a widow.

"Yes, I remember 'Alvie' very well," Mrs. Felton said. "I was about 9 when the family left the village. I knew Mr. and Mrs. Edison, too—'Alvie's' father and mother, you see, and I also knew 'Alvie's' sister, who was considerably older."

THOMAS ALVA EDISON

1847—1931

Thomas Edison is dead. To his memory the whole world will long pay grateful tribute. No one man has EVER contributed so much toward human happiness.

His was the mark of true greatness—accorded all the great honors he so richly deserved — yet he served mankind with a humble heart.

Time alone can record the value of his achievements—by his genius and untiring effort the world has been made a better place in which to live.

With the image of his kindly face ever before us, may we gain strength to carry on the work he so gloriously started.

building. It will also mark the completion of the entire program, of which the new building is a part, Supt. Geore H. Bowman said today. The program will be featured by a dedicatory address by E. O. Skinner, state director of education.

Marionites are reminded by Supt. Bowman of the scope of the projects in the building program adopted in 1928 an estimated expenditure of $750,000, for which bonds were voted by local citizens.

Program Complete

Not only has the program been completed as outlined in 1928, but many additional improvements not contemplated two years ago have been made possible at no increase in expense.

Particular attention is called to the remodeling and enlarging program, as the new building and sites are to be taken up in later stories.

A total of 19 classrooms have been added at the buildings affected by the program, and all these new rooms were put in use when the school term opened this fall.

At the north Main street building, five class rooms an office, a rest room for teachers and pupils, additional heating facilities have been built and put in use. The office and rest rooms are in addition to the planned program. The work was completed at a cost of $61,208. At this building, $800 was spent for equipment.

Four New Classrooms

The Mark street building has been improved and enlarged by the building of four class rooms and the additional heating plant specified in the program. In addition, the entire sanitary equipment of the building has been replaced with new, two rest rooms have been added, and an assembly and community room seating 150, and a kitchen for use by teachers and community clubs were built. The total cost of building the addition was $45,500, while new equipment cost $1,350.

At the Pearl street building, six classrooms have been added, and new heating equipment has been installed in accordance with the program. Additional improvements include the construction of two rest rooms, an assembly room seating 150, and construction of a small kitchen for teachers and community clubs. The cost of all improvements was $55,500, plus $4,200 for new equipment.

Four new classrooms, an additional heating plant were completed at the Glenwood building, as specified in the program. Additional improvements at this building include the conversion of basement space into an assembly room seating 400 persons, and addition of a rest room. The cost of improvements in this building totalled $52,500 plus $3,000 for new equipment.

DEGREES CONFERRED AT GRANGE MEETING

LARUE, Oct. 19—Bowling Green grange met at the hall south of town Friday night with Master Everett Harris presiding. After a short business session the third and fourth degrees were conferred upon Miss Helen Lippincott. There was a good attendance. The next meeting will be Oct. 30.

Attend Dedication.

A number of the members of Marion Tent No. 32, United Spanish War veterans attended the dedication of a monument erected to the memory of United Spanish War Veterans of Ohio at Marysville yesterday. Those in attendance were Commander F. R. Scott, J. G. Orahood, George Platz, A. C. Vogt, Carson S. Shetterly, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Andrews and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Glatz.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, Oct. 20

THE astral influences for this day are of a very promising nature, with prospect of high initiative and stirring events, although these may be jeopardized by tendencies to impetuosity, extravagance, immoderate and precipitate conduct. With calm and well-planned action there is augury for much success and advancement, with a stabilizing of the fortunes and accumulated possessions. There may be change and also a disability or accident.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great opportunity, with promise of advancement, stabilized fortunes and accumulation of real possessions, with power and prestige, but these should not be imperiled by rash and hasty conduct, disputes or strife. Be careful, moderate and considerate, also shun accident. A child born on this day may be talented, clever and ambitious, in fact over aspiring, extravagant and aggressive. With restraint and sagacity it should attain position and a substantial fortune.

Theater News And Reviews

"FIVE STAR FINAL" RUNNING AT OHIO

"Five Star Final," closing at the Ohio Wednesday smashes through as a big picture, one you don't want to miss. The newspaper plot takes a different tone and turns on the yellow tabloids to show them up in a dastardly light.

Edward G. Robinson scores the biggest success of his screen career as the managing editor of the New York Gazette, a man who hated his job and finally "washed his hands" of the whole dirty business.

The cast vies with Robinson in the acting. H. B. Warner is magnificent as the husband of Frances Starr, a woman whose past is dragged out on the eve of her daughter's wedding. Marian Marsh rises to heights in the dramatic denunciation climax. Anthony Bushell, her fiance, carries his small part effectively. Comedy honors go to George E. Stone as the contest editor and to Harold Waldridge, the copy boy. Aline McMahon does well in her part as Robinson's secretary.

To increase circulation, Robert Elliott, circulation manager and Purnell Pratt, also from the circulation department, with the paper owner, Oscar Apfel, demand more sex stuff in the stories. They drag out a 20-year-old story of a woman who justifiably killed her betrayer, and smear the scandalous story with pictures, across the front page. Two suicides, a broken wealthy family, and the heartrending life of one young girl result.

The picture starts with mud-throwing and ends with a climax that shakes the heart enough. It's a grand picture. * * * E. H.

IN GOOD AT PALACE

The Palace story of Brooklyn contended "It Pays" to be in the prison walls, where, outside of the Palace, but the cast is good.

Milton Berle stars as "Slick Regan," the ex-prison inmate. Ona Munson and Ray Walker are excellent as "Jane" and "Tommy." The rest have their parts to perfect.

Family Wreck Averted

Something of the work accomplished by the Family Welfare society investigator in assisting Marion's needy, is shown in the story below of a family nearly separated by dissension between husband and wife, growing out of unemployment. This is one of a series of stories which show the need of Marion's support to the society. Identities have been omitted.

Mrs. H. visited the welfare office with a plaintive story of the hard time she and her husband were having to keep their family together.

She was disgusted with him. She felt that surely he could get a job in Marion or another city if he tried, and was continually nagging at him. Nerves, overwrought by a long period of trying to get a job after he had been laid off at a Marion factory, were beginning to break under this continued "henpecking." Both were at swords points when Mrs. H. went to the office.

Mr. H. too, had visited the welfare office and each visit brought him more discouraged than ever. His wife couldn't understand that unemployment also existed outside of Marion.

The worker talked with her, suggesting that she try to understand the situation, stop her nagging. She replied that she "was going crazy with him around the house all of the time."

Later, when the husband went to the office he declared he was going away from Marion, leave his family behind him. He couldn't bear to live in his home any longer. He would miss the children, to be sure, and finally, agreed that he couldn't leave them for a very long time. He thought perhaps their mother would treat them better if he wasn't at home to irritate her.

He was exceptionally proud of his oldest daughter. She was sensible and understanding and never complained about the things she couldn't have. He talked at length about his children, about unemployment and the fact that everyone was having troubles and was discouraged.

The worker talked long and earnestly to the man, trying to strengthen his morale, and when he left the office he had given up the idea of deserting his family, agreeing that his troubles were perhaps a test of character and that if he and his wife each tried harder, they might get along together better.

FIND INCREASED USE OF FARM PRODUCTS

Low Prices and Large Crops Getting Results in Ohio.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 19—Low prices and plentiful crops are increasing the use of farm products raised in Ohio, and the public is returning to the habits of two decades ago in its food consumption, according to Carl J. West, research director for the Ohio Farm Bureau.

"The springing up of small bakeries is very noticeable at this time," said West. "Bread is showing signs of again becoming the staff of life.

"City commission houses report the sale of heavy tonnage of fruits and vegetables

"Local meat stores, dressing their own meats, have increased in numbers in the vicinity of the larger cities

"The glassware factories have been busy manufacturing cans for home use Peaches, pears and tomatoes, especially, have been canned in large volumes.

"City people are buying potatoes, for instance, in bushels instead of lots of five pounds each.

"Farmers are reporting the sale of a surprisingly high percentage of their large crops, in view of the heavy production this year.

"In times of slow business, people turn to the staple articles of food, and this change favors the Ohio farmer.

"The consuming public seems again to be willing to do more work—in food preparation. More people are willing to go to a bakery to obtain bread, which they now consider of better flavor rather than take whatever may be offered at their door.

"The point to this change in attitude toward bread, which is of interest to the farmers is the renewed interest of the public in this chief product made from wheat.

Mr. Edison's perfection of the incandescent light. Although his famous Menlo Park demonstration did not take place until Dec. 31, 1879, he perfected the light on Oct. 21.

His Estimate on Inventions

His electrical inventions were considered by the snowy haired genius as the greatest of his 1,300-odd patents, whose value to mankind has been set at $15,000,000,000.

Mr. Edison's death ended an 11-weeks' illness, which began with a sudden collapse, Aug. 1. Saturday afternoon his children, grandchildren, and servants filed through his room. Silently each looked for a moment at the figure, sleeping peacefully on a white bed, at the head of which was Mrs. Edison.

Throughout the evening and into the morning's early hours Dr. Howe and the family maintained their vigil. Police guarded the estate.

The news of the inventor's passing was carried to waiting reporters by Arthur L. Walsh, vice president of Thomas A. Edison Industries, Inc.

"Mr. Edison is dead," he said simply. He appeared pale and visibly shaken.

Then he read Dr. Howe's formal bulletin: "Thomas Alva Edison quietly passed away at 24 minutes after 3 a. m., Oct. 18, 1931." In an instant the message was circling the world. Mr. Edison's own inventions played a part in its transmission.

"Never an Atheist"

"He never was an atheist," said a statement by Mr. Walsh. "Though he subscribed to no orthodox creed, no one who knew him could have doubted his belief in a reverence for a supreme intelligence, and his whole life, in which the ideal of honest loving service to his fellow man was predominant, indicated how faithfully he followed those two commandments, wherein lie 'all the law and the prophets.'" The two commandments were quoted as: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all they soul, and with all thy mind. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

In this connection Dr. Howe described for The Associated Press two incidents about Mr. Edison's views.

"If there is life hereafter, or if there is none," he quoted Mr. Edison as saying, "it does not matter."

"When asked if he believed in immortality," Dr. Howe continued, "he answered briefly, 'No one knows.'"

At another time during his illness, the physician recounted, Mr. Edison "gazed upward into space, his face illuminated with a smile. He said, 'It is very beautiful over there.'"

Vitality Amazing

After his collapse in August, Mr. Edison's remarkable stamina enabled him to rally. His old alertness, however, was dimmed; in fact, associates traced his illness back to an attack of pneumonia more than two years ago.

Diabetes, gastric ulcers, Bright's disease, and uremic poisoning combined to wear down the inventor's resistance. For the last six days he had been unable to take any nourishment.

Mrs. Edison remained in attendance; she felt her husband's dependence on her. She was the last person he recognized, smiling wanly a week before his death when she shouted into his ear, "Dearie, how are you?"

"As Mr. Edison passed away," Dr. Howe said, "Mrs. Edison was holding his hand and patting his forehead.

"She averaged between two and three hours sleep daily for the last 16 days and stood up remarkably well under the strain and shock of death. She is not ill now."

Messages of sympathy and tribute to Mr. Edison's memory were received at the rambling red house from all parts of the world—from President Hoover, from Pope Pius XI, and from other rulers, diplomats, and business associates.

At Cambridge, Mass., two college boys lauded his generosity. They were Wilber B. Horton, of Seattle, Wash., and Arthur O. Williams, of East Providence, R. I., to whom Mr. Edison gave scholarships at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as winners of nation-wide "bright boy" contests.

SCULPTOR IMPRESSED.

Says Death Mask Shows Fine Expressing Greatness.

By The Associated Press

WESTPORT, Conn., Oct. 19—A death mask of Thomas A. Edison shows that he had the face of the great man he was, in the opinion of James Earle Fraser, noted sculptor.

Fraser, friend of the Edison family for years, made an impression of the inventor's face and hands yesterday to preserve for the ages a likeness of Edison as he looked at the end of his long life.

"He had a marvelous, powerful face," the artist said today. "The beautiful, full forehead, the nose, the mouth, the chin—practically all the great qualities are in that face.

"The hands, too, are wonderful: delicate, sensitive nails and fingertips, yet withal they show great power."

Serene in death, with the look of tranquility which usually comes with life's end, the inventor showed little of the ravages of his illness, the sculptor said.

ORDER TWO SHOVELS FOR HOOVER DAM

Delivery To Be Made Next Month; Total Boosted to Nine.

Delivery will be made early in November of two electric shovels ordered from the Marion Steam Shovel Co. by Six Companies, Inc., general contractors for the Hoover dam project, D. J. Shelton, vice president of the Marion company, said today.

To date, a total of nine shovels have been ordered for the project by Six Companies, Shelton said. The most recent order was placed through B. Engstrom, manager of the San Francisco office of the Marion company. Several other orders are expected later, Shelton stated.

"The machines already furnished the company are performing highly satisfactorily," Shelton said, "and the officials of the company are pleased with their operation."

The latest shovels ordered are to be used in building the diversion tunnels before the dam itself can be constructed, the official said. They are of type 490 with a 2¼ cubic yard dipper, he explained.

WIFE EXCHANGE IS BLAMED IN KILLING

Mansfield Man Shot to Death, Allegedly Over Unsatisfactory Trade.

By United Press

MANSFIELD, O., Oct. 19—An exchange of wives, leaving both traders dissatisfied, was blamed by authorities today for the death of one man and the arrest of the second on a charge of murder.

Paul Smith, 30, was shot to death at the home of Henry Swartz, 28, who while admitting the killing, according to officers, denied the charge of wife trading.

Sheriff Walter Underwood said Smith's relatives asserted the two men carried out the agreement three months ago to trade wives. Swartz then left town and did not return until last night.

Underwood quoted him as narrating he drove up to the front of his home and saw Smith inside. He walked back to his car and secured a shotgun. As he walked towards the door, Swartz said, Smith appeared on the porch and made a movement as though to draw a gun from his hip pocket. Swartz allegedly then fired, killing Smith instantly.

Sheriff Underwood believed the two men had quarrelled over terms of the asserted "wife deal." Swartz will be arraigned tomorrow.

HOUSE BURNS WHEN TRUCKS ARE DELAYED

Fire Department Equipment Held Up 10 Minutes at Rail Crossing.

A delay of 10 minutes at railroad crossings is believed by Fire Chief T. J. McFarland to have been responsible for the complete destruction by fire of a two story frame dwelling of W. D. Loucks on Fountain street late last night with a loss estimated by the fire chief at $1,200.

Fire trucks from both the No. 2 and 3 stations were held up by freight trains on their way to the fire, the No. 2 pumper at the Kenton avenue crossing and the pumper from the No. 3 station at the Silver street crossing. When the apparatus finally reached the house, the fire chief said this morning, the blaze had made such headway, that it was impossible to check the blaze with the small stream of water from the booster tank of the pumper from the No. 2 station.

The house was outside the corporation limit. The nearest fire hydrant was too far away to be reached with hose. When firemen arrived all of the household goods had been removed from the first floor and they helped in removing canned fruit from the cellar.

The fire is thought to have started from sparks on a shingle roof. The house was the property of the Evans Lime & Stone Co.

Force Here Undermanned Chief Tells Ministers

Marks Says City Needs 35 Patrolmen To Adequately Enforce Laws; Points to Need of Cruiser Squad and Declares Local Department Is Poorly Equipped.

"We need not only the cooperation of our superiors, those indirectly or directly associated with us and our own men, but we need the cooperation of every individual in the community in enforcing the laws," Chief of Police W. E. Marks, said this morning in an address before the Marion County Ministerial association.

The chief pointed out that Marion's police force, according to the distribution of policemen in ratio to the population, should have 35 policemen, whereas it has 27 men, one of whom has been on leave of absence this summer because of sickness.

Outlines Procedure

He outlined for the ministers something of the procedure in the department in investigating cases. "In our investigations some think the department has nothing to do. Compare the department with the fire department. Everytime there's a fire, the city knows of it. There are so many willing to assist the firemen that they are a nuisance, and when the fire department goes out, it is always full-manned. The opposite of all these applies to the police department."

"From outside sources, unsigned letters and anonymous phone calls, 95 per cent of the information is no good," he continued, as he attempted to make clear to his audience the reason why so many of the calls which come to the office demanded investigation, never result in an arrest.

He explained the formal filing of an affidavit for the arrest of a violator, which brought forth a discussion later among the ministers. He explained how unobtrusively the department must work to gather evidence before papers are filed.

With an adequate police force and the necessary cruising equipment, the department could cover Marion effectively, he pointed out. "The car we have now for cruising is an old model and so cumbersome that we have to drive to an intersection to turn around," was his comment on the cruising equipment of the department. "Two men in a cruiser can accomplish more than six men on foot," he concluded.

Answers Questions

Chief Marks conducted a forum at the close of his talk, answering questions regarding the enforcement of the prohibition law in which the ministers were greatly interested.

"Everyone should be dealt with alike, regardless of their place in the community," Chief Marks said regarding the arrests made for violation of the prohibition law, for which those able pay a fine and are released and the poor man works out his fine in jail.

The meeting opened with prayers by the members, and a song, "Steal Away," sung by the ministerial quartet, Rev. E. C. Pottorf of Fite Memorial Baptist church, Dr. C. E. Turley of Epworth M. E. church, Rev. G. G. Canfield of First Church of the Brethren, and Rev. Carl V. Roup of First United Brethren church. Rev. Mr. Roup, president of the association, presided.

Rev. B. E. Hillman of Full Gospel Assembly, Rev. O. Sheppard Lawrence of Bethel A. M. E. church and Rev. E. A. Gradwohl of Prospect were received as members of the association.

Committees and the chairman were appointed by Rev. Mr. Roup to serve for the year. They follow: program, Rev. James O. Dodd, Central Christian church; public morals and law enforcement, Rev. Lawrence A. Wood of Trinity Baptist church; social, Rev. James M. Fisher, director of Lee Street Presbyterian church; related organization, Rev. J. A. Clerfief of Forest Lawn Presbyterian church.

Plans were made for a field day with Anti-Saloon League workers here, but definite plans were not discussed. The association will hold a reception for its new members in the near future.

"Incipient Gangitis."

Police Commissioner Mulrooney, of New York City, has become the unofficial leader of an unofficial campaign against the causes of youthful waywardness. His methods and convictions are receiving attention wherever there is a crime problem.

Nothing he has said within the last few weeks deserves more attention than his "antidotes for incipient gangitis" given in the course of an address to the rookie graduates of the New York police academy. He instructed the new policemen to get acquainted with the boys in their neighborhood in an easy, friendly fashion, to talk things over with them, and to have much the same relations with them as a favorite coach might have at a school or college with the players on his team. He illustrated the advantages of such relationships with a true story.

Sergeant Albert Doublas was assigned to a Brooklyn district where youthful hoodlums were running roughshod over property rights and making life miserable for the police. Sergeant Doublas looked over the situation, noticed that the only thing in the district which had any appeal to youth was a small moving picture theater, and set to work.

He organized a baseball league. He promised the boys in the district that the championship games at the end of the season would be played at Ebbets field, home lot of the Brooklyn Robins. Suddenly, complaints about broken windows and raided pushcarts ceased. Corner loafers took a new interest in living. Hoodlums became unpopular. The district decided that if the police sergeant was a good fellow they could afford to give him a break. A crime problem disappeared.

A few days ago President Hoover advised Americans to shift their hero worship from gangsters to policemen. If his secretaries have informed him of the reaction to his statement he knows that the public is willing to admire policemen if they deserve admiration. Any policeman who can show by the way he handles his job that his heart is in it can be as much of a hero as Sergeant Doublas, in his rowdy Brooklyn district.

Of the 3,376,438 residents of Chicago, 842,057 are foreign born. It would be interesting to know the relative proportion of the slackers who are dodging tax payments and have put the city into the financial shape it is in. Don't guess too hurriedly. The big ratio may be among the native born.

History's Evidence.

Business predictions are out of style. The depression juggernaut flattened them out with such ease that the people lost faith.

They continue to be made, nevertheless. The Standard Statistics Co. says: "Domestic business is thoroughly deflated, and is unlikely to drop greatly below the current very low level." Other statements of a similar nature are common.

This belief that the bottom finally has been touched leads to speculation as to the speed with which business will recover, once the upturn gets under way. History's evidence furnishes the material for guessing.

In the postwar depression of 1920-22, business activity fell for six months, remained at the bottom for six months, and climbed for twelve months before coming to the top again.

In the brief depression of 1924, business activity declined for three months, then improved for three months.

In the depression at the outbreak of the World war, business activity declined for seven months, remained stagnant for one month, and required six months more to reach the top.

In the depression of 1910-12, eleven months passed from the time of the break until business reached bottom, and six months passed before it climbed back to normal.

In the so-called panic of 1907, business declined rapidly for two months, remained low for six months, and climbed to normal again in eleven months.

In the so-called "rich man's panic" of 1903-4, business began to recover as quickly as it had declined, then hovered below normal for ten months before it went over the top. A similar trend was shown in the silver campaign depression of 1896-7.

The broad deduction is that business requires as long to climb out as it required to fall in, once it gets a good start. Depression despondency, however, disappears when the uppull comes into evidence. If the bottom of the depression has been reached the beginning of the up-hill is not far away.

We simply can not get away from the suspicion that the citizen of Nashville, Indiana, who tells about having put a mouse into the cage of a five-foot rattlesnake for food for the reptile and being forced to remove it because it was eating the snake, is what the late Colonel Roosevelt would have termed a nature fakir.

Thomas A. Edison.

Many men die in the course of a year. Their passing may be unmarked outside of their neighborhood, or it may throw a nation into mourning. There are great champions and also-rans thrown together indiscriminately in the race of life.

Among the millions who die there are few of such importance, however, that the world pauses to remark its loss. Such a man has just died—Thomas A. Edison, whose name will shine in the same historical luminousness that marks the names of the great philosophers, statesmen, poets and scientists. His contribution to mankind's cultural storehouse was as great as any of the greatest of them gave.

Today, in every civilized nation of the earth, there are people saying sadly to one another, "Thomas Edison is dead." In their voices is no alarm or surprise, because it has been known for a long time that the great inventor's life was approaching its close. They are only sad that the inevitable swinging of the reaper's scythe finally has cradled such a great and good man.

Even those people who thought of Thomas Edison only as a kindly old gentleman who, once upon a time, invented the electric light and the phonograph, and who in recent years has been puttering with goldenrod, questionnaires, and occasional interviews with the press, are dimly conscious of his true stature in the timeless world of men who have performed extraordinary services for the world.

Thomas Edison began his career as an inventor by making improvements in telegraph machines, although his first patent was for an electric vote recorder in 1868. His inventions include basic ideas in the field of electric dynamos, the electric light, the telegraph, the storage battery, the electric railway, the talking pictures and the motion picture machine. The mark he left on the world he lived in can be distinguished a hundred times a day in the life of every individual.

His versatility was amazing. In addition to the list given above, the force of his genius was exerted on problems in chemical production and metallurgy. He assisted in the invention of the first typewriter. He is rightly given most of the credit for inventing the phonograph. He discovered the "Edison effect," which cleared the path for radio broadcasting and reception. He spent years working on a storage battery. He helped the United States government with more than two-score problems. His last study was to determine the possibility of making synthetic rubber from goldenrod. His inventions were utilitarian, which accounts for the deep gratitude expressed to Mr. Edison during his lifetime, and now at the occasion of his death, by their users all over the world.

Ohio, where Thomas Edison was born, has been mother to many men whose deeds have moved the world to progress. The state has been prouder of none of them than it is of Thomas A. Edison—benefactor of mankind.

School Teachers.

Chicago's tax muddle has inflicted an extreme hardship on that city's thousands of school teachers. They have received no money for their services since last April. Chicago needs the teachers, and the teachers need their jobs. Many have stayed despite opportunities to take positions elsewhere, no doubt; many were forced to stay by circumstances beyond their control. They have been receiving pay in scrip, exchangeable at certain stores for merchandise. Obviously, no such primitive system of reward can be continued indefinitely.

Teachers in many cities and school districts are in the same predicament, perhaps not so serious but serious enough to upset their plans and place them in dangerous economic positions. School years have been shortened. Warnings have been given that no salaries will be paid after the insufficient amount of money on hand is exhausted. Salaries, already low, have been cut to fit the available tax funds. Teachers are public servants without the influence that their fellow servants who are closer to the purse strings enjoy. When funds run short they are the first ones to feel the pinch.

School efficiency, nevertheless, does not suffer at such times. There is none of the slipshod work that would result among employes in other lines of work. The teacher's work is always cut out for him and he attacks it in good spirit. He realizes the uncertainty of his position in communities where school funds are short, but the work of education continues undisturbed. Communities obliged against their will to bring hardship to the school teaching profession should be quick to appreciate the profession's fine spirit.

Out of the Darkness.

Indictment of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, on a charge of violating the federal corrupt practices act, will hasten termination of a disturbing case that has been hanging fire too long for the public good. Either Bishop Cannon is guilty or innocent. The bitter recriminations made by both sides in the attempt to prove their point out of court have only muddled the situation. The congressional investigation of the bishop's affairs created nothing but ill will against all parties concerned.

The charge against the bishop hinges upon the handling of contributions made to the anti-Smith campaign in 1928 by E. C. Jameson, a New York capitalist. The indictment, containing ten counts, lists contributions of $58,000 made to the campaign by Mr. Jameson between September 13 and October 12 of the campaign year. The congressional investigation was based on the contention that only $17,000 of the $58,000 was reported to the clerk of the house of representatives, in accordance with the federal corrupt practices act.

Now that the case has been started into the proper channels, it is out of the realm of general discussion until a verdict has been made. Bishop Cannon's reputation and an important governmental principle are in the balance. The quicker the court makes its decision the better it will be for every one.

THE LIGHT OF AGES.

Wolves in Ohio in 1855.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

The fact that it was not legal a few years ago to kill squirrels at any season, called to attention the changed conditions in Ohio in the last 125 or more years. The legislature which sat from 1807 to 1808 was petitioned to do something to destroy the squirrels which were playing havoc with the farmers' field crops. The woods which yet covered the most of the surface of the state were literally alive with squirrels, gray, black and red.

The members of the legislature hit upon an ingenious method of encouraging their destruction, at no cost to the general revenue of the state. A law was enacted which required every male person in the state above the military age—eighteen—to deliver to the clerk of the township in which he lived not less than 100 squirrel scalps each year. Those who brought in their quota were given receipts attesting the fact. Those who failed to bring any in, or fell below the 100 required, were assessed at the rate of three cents each to the full amount of the deficiency.

For those who delivered more than the quota of 100 scalps there was this provision. They should be paid out of money collected from delinquents at the rate of three cents for each scalp they presented above the quota, as far as the assessments would go. After that they were given receipts for their excess deliveries which should count against their requirements for the ensuing year.

As late as the session of the legislature that sat in 1828-29, the legislature added to an act intended to protect sheep from dogs, also protection from wolves. As late as 1858 the legislature made an appropriation of $300 to pay bounties on wolf scalps. This doubtless arose under a law of 1852 by which bounties of $4.25 each were provided on wolf scalps; so that while this does not figure out exactly even, there must have been about eighty wolves killed in the state as late as 1858. The northwestern part of the state was still a swamp and was probably the haunt of these prowling wolves.

Editorial Opinion.

VICTORIA KENT.

Victoria Kent is a citizen of Spain. The new republic has given her one of the most important posts, it is said, ever held anywhere in the world by a woman. She takes charge of Spain's entire prison system—forty-nine state prisons, six national and 115 smaller ones.

Senorita Kent expects to make expenses fall within the budget allotment for prisons, and to see to it that prison inmates "get a square deal."

It is said of this woman that she is "one of the most remarkable women in the world." She is a lawyer, and a good one. And yet she is said to be "all woman." Her first important public task was the defense of accused Republican leaders. It is said of her, "she has reached the top in a man's country, and no American woman, even though she has been in Turkey, can appreciate what that means until she has been in Spain."

Being a woman, it is not strange that she has at once sought to relieve the terrible experiences of imprisoned people, whom she found "caged like wild animals" and treated as such. She has produced a larger proportion of guards, let the prisoners work and exercise and gives them square meals. She has accomplished this reform against intense opposition. And she has made her administration pay. She is a hard worker, and does her work right.

Perhaps Senorita Kent may prove an example for her American sisters to emulate. Anyhow, Senorita Kent has given her sisters throughout the world something of a mark to shoot at, and she has done this in a remarkably short period of time. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

Twenty Years Ago.

It was Thursday, October 19.

The Star carried a dispatch from Stockholm announcing that the Nobel prize for the most distinguished achievement in physics would be awarded to Thomas A. Edison. This was only one of the many honors that were heaped upon the inventor whose passing yesterday is being mourned by the civilized world.

Three marriages took place the day before, according to the Star. Mrs. Anna Court and Mr. John W. McKelvey were married by Rev. J. W. Miles. Miss Mary M. Murphy and Mr. Andrew Seckel were married by Rev. Father Joseph Denning. Miss Grace May Queen, of Marion, and Mr. Charles E. Himmenger, of Chicago, were married by Rev. F. E. Zechiel.

Colds Via the Kiss.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

During the recent epidemic of infantile paralysis, mothers were taught once again the great importance of cleanliness. Their attention was called to the necessity of safeguarding the infants and young children against contact with ill companions.

The real cause of infantile paralysis has not as yet been discovered. Many other diseases of childhood are not definitely understood. But it is known that the secretions of sick persons are a menace. It is well known, too, that the kissing of young children is dangerous.

If babies knew the dangers that lurk in kissing and were able to talk, I am sure they would say, "Please don't kiss me. I don't want to be sick." Why not heed their silent pleas?

The temptation to kiss an infant is great. But the danger of such a practice should offset the temptation. Never kiss an infant on the mouth. Contamination by this indulgence may even prove fatal to the young child. Colds, as well as more dreaded infectious diseases, are easily spread by kissing.

If a child must be kissed, it is much better to kiss it on the back of the head rather than on the face. It is far better that the child never be kissed at all than to subject it to unnecessary danger.

The common cold as well as pneumonia, influenza and other infectious diseases, is easily transmitted from one individual to another. This is why there is danger in all crowded places. Traveling in the crowded subway trains, eating in a crowded restaurant, or living under crowded conditions, often leads to infection.

Under such circumstances an individual is certainly in close contact with others. But it is by no means as close contact as is the act of kissing a child. It is not difficult to understand how easily a disease may be transmitted from an adult to a child.

Often the adult is not aware of the fact that he is carrying undesirable germs. He may have sufficient resistance to combat the infection himself, but at the same time he carries the germs. These he gives to the child when he kisses it and in this unsuspected manner is doing a mighty wrong.

If you have infants or young children in your home make sure they are not kissed by loving friends or relatives who come to see them. You will be counted a crank, but don't you mind that!

If the children have colds or are sneezing, instruct them how to cover the mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing. They should not play with others and certainly never kiss others when they have colds.

It is always wise to keep a child at home if he is ill. By sending him to school he may quickly transmit the infection to his classmates. It is because of negligence in this matter that colds and infectious diseases are so quickly spread among schoolchildren. This is the way to start a severe epidemic.

It rests upon the mother's shoulders to prevent such calamities. Do not worry about your child losing too much work by being away from school. He will make up his work as soon as he gets well. By staying at home he will not be a source of danger to other children. If you and all mothers takes these precautions your child will be protected and so will the other children.

Woehler's Great Discoveries.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Friedrich Woehler will always be remembered for his epochal chemical discovery, the synthesis of urea. So far as known, this was the first organic compound produced by artificial laboratory means without the agency of life. In 1828, then, Woehler broke down the barrier between organic and inorganic chemistry.

It was really not until the first quarter of the nineteenth century that inorganic chemistry became well established. As Van Wagener says in "Beacon Lights of Science," most of the commoner elements had been recognized as such, the atomic theory of Dalton had been demonstrated beyond all question. Lavoisier had introduced the balance as the fundamental tool of the laboratory, Berthollet had made clear the principle of chemical equilibrium, and Gay-Lussac the law of combining volumes. But in the domain of organic chemistry, which has to do with those forms of matter found in living things—plants and animals—the old alchemistic theory of "phlogiston," some sort of vital force, as the cause of the myriad transformations constantly in progress in the world of life, still held sway.

It was just at this period that Friedrich Woehler came to the fore with his synthesis of urea. He was born in 1800 at Eschersheim near Frankfort-on-the-Main. After receiving an elementary education at the local gymnasium, he studied medicine and chemistry at the universities of Marburg and Heidelberg. Later he worked under the remarkable chemist, Berzelius, at Stockholm, in this way establishing a life-long friendship.

Urea receives its name from human urine, where it was first found. When news of Woehler's discovery reached Liebig, the most widely-known chemist of his day, he joined in with Woehler and conducted important experiments and researches, especially those on the oil of bitter almonds, the radicle benzoyl, and on uric acid. Thus these two great chemists, working in conjunction, laid broad and deep the foundations of the science of organic chemistry. Upon this science rests, in no small measure, much of the industrial life of our time. It should be remembered that these two discovered, not only the benzoyl radicle, but also the ethyl radicle, which is common to alcohol and ether; and that these were followed by other discoveries of similar character, by Bunsen and other chemists.

In 1825 Woehler became teacher of chemistry in the industrial school then newly established in Berlin. In 1836 he took the chair of chemistry at the University of Goettingen, where he remained until his retirement. Woehler is remembered for discovering the first case of isomerism, that is, the existence of organic substances or compounds which have identical composition but entirely distinct properties. He founded the nickel industry by devising a process of manufacturing pure nickel on a large scale. He died on September 23, 1882.—Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

A Bali Wedding.

BY TEMPLE MANNING

American brides and grooms have been known to complain that wedding guests, in bidding them farewell just before the honeymoon, have thrown shoes at them with excessive force.

They do not throw shoes at newly-wedded couples in the Malay island of Bali, but they do sprinkle the main actor and actress with holy water in such quantities that they frequently have to change their wedding costumes.

The ceremony is usually quite simple—the groom being welcomed at his beloved's house with great festivities and dancing. The bride's father takes his new son-in-law to the family bosom by offering him a chew of betel nut, then the wedding party, consisting of relatives and friends, to say nothing of the dogs of the village—go to the temple or to the wedding shrine.

Here the village priest, after accepting the gifts showered upon him for his work, rings his bell and reads the service. After this, the bell is rung again and the bride and groom are doused with holy water. The exchange of rice and spiced meat concludes the service. The feasting then begins—there is music, dancing, eating and drinking until the sun sets.

Women in Bali have few luxuries, but they have as many privileges and pleasures as the men. They are contented creatures and do not seem to mind the fact that they have to share their lord and master with his other wives.

The caste system obtains in Bali, but as all castes are agricultural workers and participate in the same rights and obligations there is little dissension on this sunny, rich island. The Balinese are of the Hindu faith, a religion they inherited from their Javanese ancestors, but it is a faith modified by certain Buddhistic precepts and to a degree by the animistic beliefs of Polynesia.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Oct. 19 — Diary of a modern Pepys: All morning at my chores and glad to be interrupted by H. N. and Ruth Swanson, motoring in from Chicago. But they would stay only a moment and I sent them off to Walter Trumbull's in my new bengine buggy, very regal.

To the depot to meet Meredith Nicholson, sojourning from Indianapolis, and with him to the Ambassador to sit awhile exchanging argle-bargle about this, that and the other and in especial the superiority of the pan-paw. So home and found Dick Berlin, the gazetteer.

To the theater and sat alongside the critic Burns Mantle, whose slothful assistant I used to be and the staunchest character I know. And between acts talking to Irma Goldberg, Kent Cooper, Will and Jessie Hayes and Robert Ripley. Then driving Sime Silverman to his Variety office and to bed.

* * *

It seems no time since Robert L. Ripley came shyly out of the west—one of the most bashful cartoonists Park Row ever beheld. He had come from native San Francisco to draw sport cartoons for the old Globe. The first time I met him he was gazing at after midnight life from a darkened corner of Tom Healy's jazz temple at Sixty-Sixth street and Broadway. In those days, although a champion sprinter and winner of many boxing trophies, he blushed like a school girl. Today "Rip," as the most amazing success of the syndicated field, addresses large audiences, appears in the talkies, before the microphone and has become an accomplished first nighter. Years have edged his hair back, but with all his traveled sophistications he is still savoured with the charm of naivette. A stranger might suspect no one had ever told him the facts of life. Ripley lives at an athletic club and keeps in physical trim. Otherwise he could not stand the grueling grind of professional demands upon his time.

Tom Healy's rowdy rendezvous was one of the Broadway high spots. Gay plumed and gallant night adventurers rounded into Healy's about 3 a. m. Vehement street orators used to gather in the neighborhood around 9 a. m. Sunday and hot gospel to dishevelled revelers staggering out to carry-alls and taxis for home. Smiling and cherubic Bennie Ubersall—still carrying on as a head waiter somewhere along Broadway—stood at the red roped entrance. To receive his welcome bow was a mark of Broadway distinction. The Healy orchestra flattered notables so they always liked to come back. When it played "Alexander's Rag Time Band" you could look up and see Irving Berlin at the door. In a like manner "Rings on Her Fingers" signaled the entrance of Blanche Ring and "Mammy" Al Jolson, a frequent visitor.

Now and then a sudden gush of civic righteousness sent cordons of police to close Healy's at 2 a. m. Such efforts took on the flavor of Mardi Gras. Great crowds, tipped off in down town haunts, would rush up to jeer, toot horns and toss confetti. Patrons upstairs would stand on tables and defy arrest. Sometimes bottles were thrown, flat fights were numerous and the next night Healy's was hells bells until dawn again.

* * *

There was a story of a famous rounder leaving Healy's in the pink of a Sabbatical dawn. At a nearby corner a curb service was going on and a tattered has-been held a banner proclaiming: "A Night Out of Life at Healy's but Not a Moment for Jesus." The stay-out stopped to idle a moment, suddenly dropped to his knees and, as the story goes, gave up his business to do evangelistic work. True or not, street missionaries were always angling for souls at that corner.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, Oct. 19—To Mrs. Edward E. Gann, at least, apparently this game called politics is as simple as it can be and should be treated in the most direct fashion.

The sister of Vice President Curtis and one of the official hostesses of a Republican administration, has been doing a little "stumping" of her own recently. And the way she goes right to the bottom of things, doubtless excites the envy of some of her more cautious brothers of the faith.

Mrs. Gann spoke before a women's Republican club in Pittsburgh recently. On the same day, in Springfield, Mass., those two Republican stalwarts—Senator Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Robert Lucas, executive director of the committee—were addressing a Republican rally.

The three spoke along pretty much the same lines. But for directness, Mrs. Gann appears to have left Fess and Lucas completely in the shade.

What the two men more or less hinted at, Mrs. Gann expressed baldly. Thus she opined:

"Victory of the Republicans in 1928 saved America from a period of hard times compared with which the depression through which we are passing would have seemed like riotous living."

Lucas, voicing the same idea, expressed it this way:

"Unless the Republican party immediately assumes its full responsibility as the dominant party a Democratic administration will likely demonstrate what hard times really are."

Senator Fess said that he believed in President Hoover the country had a "safe pilot." But Mrs. Gann, in coming to the defense of the President, put it:

"Has it ever occurred to you that, if Mr. Hoover is responsible for the depression, then he must have started the World war and put Germany in debt to the Allies and the Allies in debt to the United States?"

* * *

No short cuts for Mrs. Gann. She believes in going straight to the point.

Mrs. Gann, however, has some very good reasons for wanting to see another Republican victory in 1932. She has almost as much at stake as any one.

If brother Charles runs with President Hoover in 1932 and the ticket is defeated, then Mrs. Gann will lose everything for which she has battled so strenuously—social prestige and all.

On the other hand, if Curtis decides to run for the senate, it will be as bad for her. Her favorite perch in the vice president's section of the senate gallery must be relinquished. She will be merely the sister of the junior senator from Kansas.

FIRE DESTROYS FARM HOUSE

Loss to Gerald Hastings of West of Here Estimated at $5,000.

Special to The Star

KENTON, Oct. 19—Fire, starting while members of the family were away, Sunday morning destroyed the Gerald Hastings farm home on the Harding highway east of here near the Marion county line.

The loss of the 10-room frame building was estimated at $5,000. The blaze is believed to have started from a defective flue.

They were the owners of the Dola restaurant and were asleep in their rooms at the rear of the restaurant and were awakened by the crash to find their room filled with smoke.

The fire, which destroyed the two-story building, the contents of the restaurant and the household goods, was thought to have started from a defective flue.

The damage was estimated at several thousand dollars and was partially covered by insurance. The building, a 40x60 two-story structure, was owned by Mrs. Mary Casper of near Dola.

Hemorrhoids Go Quick
All Pile Misery Ended Without Cutting or Salves
Itching, bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back, if you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the hemmorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts, weak, flabby almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct these conditions. Dr J S. Leonhardt discovered a real internal Pile remedy After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 900 cases, he named it HEM-ROID Henney & Cooper says one bottle of HEM ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.—Adv.

Jerry grinned.

"You shouldn't tax yourself. Have you met Ann Duryea? She's wonderful."

"Why?" This was interesting. Now she's find out what it was.

"She's been through the devil of a lot. Was falsely accused of murdering her husband."

"Did she tell you that?"

"Oh, no. She never speaks of herself and her horrible experiences. The thing was all in the papers at the time and she's let it drop several times how perfect her husband was. Hi, Lola, give a friend a chance to have words with you once in a while, will you?"

Lola turned from her whispered consultation with old William. She lent to Jerry a slow, sweet smile. Venice knew an inner start. She loves him, she thought—The careless, unworried, effervescent Lola. A smile with such depths was the rarest thing for her and her eyes went intimately into Jerry's.

Venice moved a little away. She took a cocktail from the tray old William passed and stood sipping it, examining Jerry over the glass and noticing him in detail for the first time. Medium height, sandy hair, blue eyes, a nice, open, natural sort of face. He was holding Lola's hand now, between them as they stood, covertly, so no one would notice. Venice sighed. Would that sort of thing ever touch her?

"How are you, Venice?" It was Donny Reese.

As usual she pulled herself away from the things about her that gave her thought. Suddenly she remembered her mother and hastily put a quick, bright smile on her lips.

"Able to drink a cocktail," she said. Pretty good for me, went her mind.

"Is that all?" There was innuendo in his tone.

"Able to drink two cocktails."

"And after that what?"

"Three."

"And then?"

Venice was at a loss. Donny was staring down at her with such challenging, amused eyes. What was he thinking of her?

"Home," she said and knew a heaviness of heart. She had spoiled the little battledore and shuttlecock of words. She knew it but she hadn't been able to think of anything diverting to say next.

"Do you know Ann Duryea?" he asked.

"No," said Venice. "I came in after she'd been introduced to every one. Is she attractive?"

"Not attractive exactly, but fascinating. That girl's had experience. She murdered her husband, you know."

"I though she was acquitted."

"Old man Park's money acquitted her, don't you worry about that. She's a hard-boiled damsel, that one."

"What does she say about it?"

"She doesn't. But she's always mentioning how marvelous her husband was. Methinks the lady doth protest too much. Wait a minute, she's leaving now. I want to get her telephone number. She's going to be here several weeks."

He darted off. Venice forgot to feel slighted in her scrutiny of Donny's approach. He held out a hand and Ann Duryea took it indifferently. Venice could not hear their words, but he took out a pencil and little book, so she was probably giving him a number. She left with two men in her wake.

Venice looked drearily about the room. Nobody apparently was thinking of approaching her. It was too early to leave without offending Lola. No one even noticed her solitude. She wandered outside the living-room and sat down on the second step of the great winding staircase that led above. She clasped her hands about her knees and gave herself over to thoughtful speculation. So popularity could be obtained by merely the suggested background of a mysterious past. How strange. Why shouldn't cleaner, simpler, franker stuff be more appealing? It was most upsetting.

"I beg your pardon."

A young man coming down the stairs had almost trod on her. Venice looked up and he looked down. There was laughter in his face and an easy look of friendliness. He was of medium height, slender and lithe, with crisp, wavy black hair cut very short to prevent its curling. The eyes were hazel, a yellow-amber color, and exceedingly clear, the mouth a bit crooked. He wore a grey suit when the others had all donned dark blue or cutaways. A vagabond sort of young man.

"I'm Drake Farrelly. Who are you?" He sat down beside her.

She noticed that he had a cleft in his square chin and small humorous lines at the corners of his eyes.

"Venice Muir."

"What are you doing out here in your solitude?"

"Thinking."

"Thinking! What an unusual thing to do at a party."

"Oh, I do a lot of it. No one ever pays much attention to me and it leaves me lots of time for thinking."

He gave her a long analytical look, then threw back his head and laughed. He had even, white, strong teeth and the most infectious chortle. Venice laughed too. He was the most natural person that she had ever met and somehow gave her no feeling of shyness.

"I do believe you're the only honest woman in circulation."

"Are you a sort of Diogenes? Only it's an honest woman you're looking for?"

"By no means. But I stumble on some black velvet on the stairs and it turns out to be an honest woman. Extraordinary."

There was a comfortable silence and their eyes smiled at each other.

"Are you a friend of Lola's? I don't think I ever saw you before," Venice finally said.

"No, I'm the son of a friend of Mrs. Goadby's. You know — old family ties stuff. I came this afternoon under parental pressure. I'm not much on parties."

"Why?"

"Don't like the social wear and tear. More effort than going to the theater, and less to think over when you get home. Pretty damsels pursue you who mean nothing when they speak, and young men slap you on the back while they think critical things of you."

"But you're not shy. I'm shy, that's the trouble."

"Is there a trouble?"

"Oh, yes. I do like the social wear and tear but it has no time for me."

"It hasn't time for anything that hasn't its most intriguing wares in the shop window. It doesn't want to take the pains to delve inside."

"But that's dreadful. I'm most awfully dull on the surface. It's hard to think quickly with all this airy persiflage thrown at you. It embarrasses me."

"Poor Venice." His tone was warm and understanding. "But why do you bother with parties at all?"

To Be Continued.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday again, and it was kinda snappy when I woke up and let Jubilee down, and then I put on my short britches and went down and life began all over again.

I loaded up the bean burner and went out and milked the dummed brutes, and Frenchy had the little coon with him again, and it is so time now that he don't have to keep the chain on it any more. He carries it in his coat pocket, and when it gets tired of being in there or anything it climbs out and climbs up and sets on his shoulder. Some folks would rather have a little sister and some would rather have a little coon. I have got a little sister so it don't make any difference which I would rather have. I've got mine. Frenchy gets all the trouble.

Frankie and Feeble and Hiram were over before we got done chinning, because they always come early on Sunday. If they didn't see my ant with me they would think I'm shy, and I don't think shy, like pollock, my dish down and things like my socks and all of the chinese and it being always with the chinese thinking the dish. I bet my ant wouldn't like to have a book of her socks like mine was when they would laugh, and she would like to wear me by the middle with the hook and swing me around long, and then scrape me.

My ant told me what I was thinking of standing there with my face all screwed up, and I told her I was thinking I was glad I wasn't a hog, and she said for me to be glad whilst I could for it wouldn't be many years now till I was growed up, and Feeble laughed and said "Oink-oink-oink!" like a pig grunting; and then she asked me if I knowed what a little pig's ant was, and I said it was a cow, and I got my face pushed full of a sweaty rag just for telling the truth. Then Feeble got hold of the sleeves of my shirt, and just as my ant made a extra heavy swipe at me with the wash rag Feeble pulled on the sleeves and hollered, "Look up herself!" and my ant had me pulled out from under her hands and stumbled and reared and landed on the edge of the wash trough to save herself, and that made the hens flop about fifteen feet up and throw the hot water all over her, and she hollered, and my mother came running and grinned and asked me if it was my fault, and my ant said, "No, it wasn't his fault," and she glared at Feeble, and Feeble glared back at her, and said, "No, it wasn't Thomas's fault it was just his ant's meanness." Then my ant said, "If you were my daughter I would spank you till your ears bled." Feeble said, "If I was your daughter you would be so busy trying to explain how come that you wouldn't be spanking nobody."

We went in school. And my mother and ant came to church and each one had an Improved Telephone Book, so they had to come by church to show them. That is why ant dasn't use him. Today was Monday, and I was glad of it. My father was an awful pain-in-the-neck about being late.

Cheese Accessories Now Occupy Important Place

Each year more of the several hundred kinds of cheese are edging their way to American tables. Once there were only a few kinds known—our hard American cheese, the Swiss cheese, cream and some of the softer imported cheese. What with our growing number of travelers who come back with a developed taste for foreign foods like cheese, plus the enterprise of importers, exotic cheeses are no longer restricted to epicures.

At well-stocked markets we can get dozens of varieties—Camembert, Roquefort, Mont d'or, Gruyere, Pont-l'Eveque from France, Liptauer, Mara, Kranzler, and Limburger from Germany, Schweizer and Emmenthaler from Switzerland, Edame from Holland, Parmesan and Gorgonzola from Italy, Cheddar and Stilton from England—and innumerable others, not forgetting our domestic varieties.

High Nutritive Value

Cheese has twice the nutritive value of the same quantity per pound of meat, and certainly a vast array to choose from. Wherefore the cook who keeps ringing the changes on all cheeses available in local markets doesn't bear the charge of monotony.

Service of cheese adds to its palatability, and for this reason an array of accessories is helpful. Quite important are the cheese knives, and lovers of cheese varieties can do with half a dozen of these. Pronged knives for breaking the crumbly kinds, serrated knives for clean cutting, scoop-end knives for pineapple or Edam—are assurances of neat service.

Another two-in-one help is the cheese tray. It consists of an oblong metal base and glass cover. The cheese can then be kept in the refrigerator near other foods, with its own odor carefully insulated so that it doesn't spread. The glass cover is removed when the whole cheese is to be served, and it can be taken to table in the same nickeled tray in which it is kept cold.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Dicky's Watch Over the Studio Bungalow Causes Madge to Change Her Mind.

IT seemed hours, although it was but a second or two, before Lillian spoke, in tones that held such genuine enthusiastic admiration that my tense nerves relaxed and the hot dryness left my throat.

"Girl! you've done it! I was afraid it was too much to be hoped for, that you could pull a fourth act which could measure up to the other three. I know all that was nervous about it too, but you've achieved it and I'll broadcast to the dramatic universe that it's some stunt you've pulled. It would be a nifty one for an old stager in the game, but for a tyro—it out magnifique!"

High Praise from Lillian

She spread her hands with a Gallic gesture and I flushed with pleasure and relief because despite the extravagance of the compliment, it was patently sincere.

"Then you think that I won't need to make any decided change in it—that it's a matter of revision?"

"And mighty little of that," Lillian said with emphasis. "You've dotted the thing here and there—as everybody does on a first writing—with your pet 'clichés,' but that's really all there is to the revision. You'll be able to weed them out in short order, and remember, I stand ready for any talk and lotty tumbling or dictating or what have you at any minute you name."

"Thank you," I said gratefully. "I'll call on you, never fear. I want to rush this through as soon as possible so as to be free to help here if I am needed."

I waited apprehensively for her answer. Would she emphasize again—as all of the household had appeared to do—that I was not needed in this crisis that had come upon the household through the advent of the wounded Chinese, and that everybody expected me to "go into the silence" in my studio-bungalow and work on my play, regardless of what might be happening to the rest of the family? But I might have trusted Lillian's tactful kindliness. Whatever her secret opinion of the matter, she appeared candor itself as she spoke in quick accent of my suggestion.

"Of course," she said briskly, "that's the thing to do. The sooner you finish it, the better. Then you will be all ready for old Phil when he appears and in the interim, you can relieve one of us if we need it or take a much-needed rest if we do not. But we're all pretty tough——"

"Except Mother Graham and my father," I amended quickly.

"Don't make any mistake," Lillian said with a grin. "In some respects they're the toughest of us all. The men and women of the older generation could give cards and spades to any member of the next one, as far as endurance goes. But that does not alter the fact that it will be mighty fine to have you ready to step in if you are needed. But, tell me, how did you manage Mother Graham? I've been dying to hear. Of course, you've signed her up to take care of Baby Faith. She'd go through fire and tempest for the chance. But how did you manage it?"

Briefly, I told her of my conversation with my mother-in-law and at the end of it she leaned back in her chair and laughed until the tears stood in her eyes.

"To quote your slangy husband, she 'swallowed it, hook, line and sinker, and then clambered up the bank looking for the pole.' I have to slip it to you, old girl. It's something to put one over on your mother-in-law and when it's such a priceless one as this—my congratulations. You are of the elect."

She gave me an affectionate little pat and moved toward the door. "I'll leave you to your job," she said, "and I'll go tackle mine, that of official errand girl for the whole outfit. Good hunting!"

She threw up her hands in comraderly salute and drifted through the door. As I closed it after her and went back to my desk, I felt strengthened as by some powerful tonic, and I fell upon my work with a renewal of the zest which had been mine when I wrote the first words of the play which I was now finishing.

A Discovery

It was a zest which remained with me through the revision of the fourth act. With the goal before me of freedom to be of service in the strenuous activities imposed upon the family by our sheltering of the wounded Chinese, I drove straight through the work in the hours of the day left to me and also worked until long past midnight.
